Ralph Naranjo turned an interest in club racing and overnight cruising into a five-year family voyage around the world. Through lessons learned the hard way, he and his wife Lenore developed vital seamanship skills.

For over 15 years, he has moderated US Sailing Safety at Sea Seminars across the country and is an adjunct lecturer at the Annapolis School of Seamanship. His latest book The Art of Seamanship is both a narrative and a how-to text focused on navigation, weather awareness, vessel selection and small craft voyaging.
